Tourism sector weathers the COVID storm

Business

It was a tourist season that won't soon be forgotten by those operating in the sector.

Despite COVID-19 shattering any hope for a profitable summer, tourism operators in Canada's number one tourist destination displayed remarkable resilience (just to even, partially open attractions and restaurants amidst a plethora of restrictions).

Region awards large contract despite open investigation

Local

At a special meeting of council Thursday, Regional Council awarded a multi-year and multi-million dollar contract to Thomas Nutrient Solutions to run its biosolids program.

The meeting proved to be contentious after Niagara Falls Regional councillor Bob Gale began fervently speaking against awarding the contract to Thomas due to an open whistleblower investigation and indications that Thomas was not the lowest cost option.

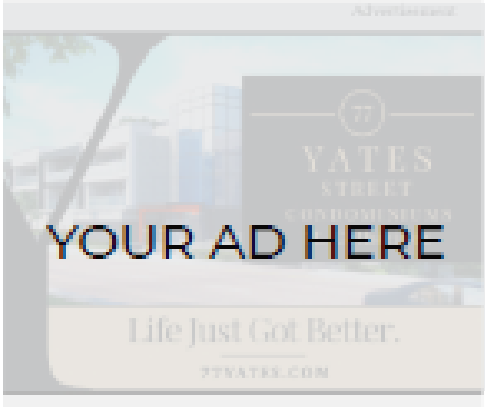

He said he received an unsolicited email from one of the involved bidders stating that "our price was nearly one million dollars less than Thomas." Gale informed them he was unable to talk to them due to the open procurement.

St. Catharines hospitality leaders hoping to bounce back

Business

The Niasepodos family has been in the hospitality business for decades. Owning the majority of St. Catharines' hotels as well as a number of restaurants over the years, they've seen ups and downs in the business cycle but nothing could have prepared them for the crushing financial blow that COVID-19 has delivered the family business over the past six months.

The inaugural Ontario-Quebec summit

Politics

This week, the Premiers of Ontario and Quebec convened their first-ever "summit" to discuss important matters of mutual interest.

PM Trudeau continues to dodge the WE scandal - but for how long?

Comment

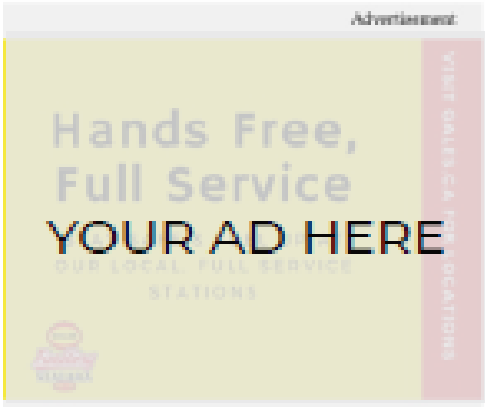

In the 2001 Steven Spielberg movie Catch Me If You Can, the lead character Frank, played by Leonardo DiCaprio, successfully performs a string of con worth millions of dollars.

As the General goes so goes the economy

Opinion

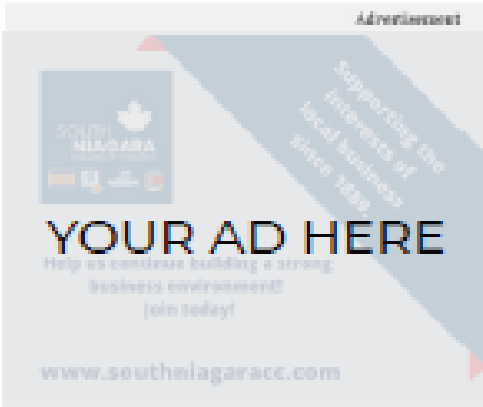

Growing up in the shadow of the Renaissance Centre on the banks of the Detroit River you learned the common refrain "as the General goes so goes the economy."
